The latest and most authoritative advices from the ontlying counties in this Congressional district furnish the strongest reasons for the belief that Mr. Phelan has broken the record. He has carried Shelby, Fayette, Hardeman and Tipton, with three districts to hear from. Fayette gives Phelan 100 majority. Two of the three are notil two years ago, when by act of the cher Ramblican and has carried Shelby, Fayette, Hardeman and Tipton, with three districts to hear from. Fayette gives Phelan 100 majority. RIVER PLANTERS DEEPLY INTER. ESTED IN THE RESULT

Of the Request Made for Aid-What Major Dabney Says of the Levees.

The planters slong the river to the southward are swaiting with considerable interest the promulgation by the Secretary of War of the alloments made by the River Commission at their mesting in New York. The Yazoo Delta Board asked the commission this year to appropriate $125, 000 out of the fund at their disposal, to add to the $100,000 levied from the planters by the Delta Board, and which amount is insufficient to carry out the plan considered necessary for the adequate protection of the levees. It is believed that with $525,000 levees can be built to stand, provided the commission can stop caving, a rewhich they hope to attain Dabney, chief engineer of the Yezoo-Mississippi Delta leveer, makes the following statement in regard to the war these levees were maintained in a comparatively perfect condition and under their protection many millions of dollars were invested in improving large areas of alluvial lands, which yielded annually a vast quantity of products in cotton and corn. During the progress of the war great havoc was made on this line of levees, both directly and indirectly, the direct destruction being incident to the opera-tions of the armies and fleets, and to the uncessing caving of the river banks, the indirect injury being pro-duced by general neglect. The same msy be said of the Yezoo-Mississippi Delta (or upper) District. At the close of the war these levees were in a very deplorable condition of in-sufficiency, the gaps in the line were very extensive and the whole Yazoo basin was at the mercy of the Missis-sippi river floods. All this country was practically uninhabi able without levee projection. The people in the territory which constitutes the levee district went to work manfully to reat re their levees. They organized a evee distric', and taxed their cutton $5 per bale, and their land a specific tax per acre. Since the close of the war they have expended nearly $6,000,000 on their leves, all the Legislature this territory was organized into a levee district, with authority to issue $500,000 in levee bonds, supported by taxation on the lands embraced in the district. These bonds were negotiated at par and the money expended in an effort to restore their line of levees, 110 miles in extent. The money which these bonds yielded was less Allen led his ticket.

Poses on the Corner of Second and

Madison Streets.

About 5 o'clock yesterday evening, while Mr. Charles Dollman, the con-tractor, was standing on the northeast corner of Second and Madison streets talking to a couple of friends, one hand resting upon a wire looped on an electric light pole, he suddenly uttered a cry and fell sprawling upon the pavement." Don't touch him don't touch him," excitedly cried one of his companions, when the other was in the act of lifting his fallen friend. The next moment Mr. Dollman sprang to his feet, unburt, but badly rattled, and during the remainder of the conference fought shy of the post. An hour or so afterward, when the current had been fully turned on, and not only the wire but the wooden post was thoroughly charged with electricity, a darky lounged up to the post and clasped it in an affectionate embrace. In an instant he was thrown upon the curb, his head at iking the stone with sufficient violence to render bim unconscious for a time. A SOCIAL EVENT.

Brilliant Reception in Honor of Miss Rebecca Treadwell. The debut in society of Miss Reecca Treadwell was made the occasion of a very elegant reception given last night in her honor at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Treadwell, at No. 228 Union street. The cream of Memphis society "The Mississippi Levee District (or lower district) has a line of levees about 220 miles in extent. Before the war these levees war these levees war a parliar to the fair debutante, and the spacious parliars of Mr. Treadwell's residence war these levees were parliars of the fair debutante, and the spacious parliars of the fair debutante, and the spacious parliars of the fair debutante, and the space war these levees were enriched by the beautiful and the space of the fair debutante, and the space of t parlors of Mr. Treadwell's residence were enriched by the beauty and fashion of the city arrayed in their entertainment in every way worthy of loveliest garb. No effort seems to have been spared by the hospitable givers of the reception to make the her in whose hencr it was given and the fair guests the had sum-moned to her site, and it is not too much to say that the result was a brilliant success. The parlors were decorated with the choicest flowers of the conservatory, and a fivral arch of "Welcome," sus-pended under the folding doors, gave to ea h visitor the assurance of hearty greeting. Arnold's Band was there, discoursing music that might have tempted a hermit to dance, and the in-vitation offered by the enticing music was freely accepted. By a happy strangement of mirrors the forms of the dancers and the particolored globes that tempered the light of the chandeliers above them were multiplied again and again, so that the spectator standing at one end of the par'ors beheld an unbroken vista of lovely forms and glowing colors, all blending harmoniously in the softened light, the former glidir g gracefully into the distant perspective, to the tuneful measure of some entrancing wal z In the dining room cham-pagne, punch and the most delicate viands were served to all who came. The table was exquisitely arranged, a bed of red roses and white flowers running down its entire length and captivating all the senses by its fragrance and beauty. Judged by the look of pleasure that seemed to animate the faces of all who were present, the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Treadwell to please their guests were rewarded to a most grateful degree and the evening was spent in a manner that left noth ing to be desired. Among the ladies
